Executive Summary

The First Eight (F8) program is a collaborative effort of Penn State University and State College Borough to address issues that arise in neighborhoods near campus as students return to town for the fall semester. The program was initiated in 2007 following visits to and consultations with several other communities that host major universities and had started similar programs with encouraging results. Our own experience, and that of other university communities, is that the first weeks of the new school year is a critical time to set the tone for the entire year. Collaboration among the officials and agencies enables us to focus our efforts where they will have the greatest impact. Additional details on the development of the F8 program may be found in Appendix B.

This executive summary provides an overview of the F8 program in the Highlands, Holmes-Foster and College Heights neighborhoods. The data presented in this report are for these specific neighborhoods and not the entire Borough, unless otherwise noted. All data are for a 16 week period for each year beginning in mid-August and running through the weekend following Thanksgiving.

Police activity has been tracked in 8 categories. These categories, while not covering the full range of police activity, are key indicators of activity that contributes to neighborhood issues. The Police categories reported here are as follows:

- Alcohol
- Assaults/Fights/Harassment
- Criminal Mischief/Trespass
- Drug Offenses
- Noise Offenses
- Public Urination
- Sex Crimes
- Theft

The key indicator tracked for Ordinance Enforcement is the number of refuse violations.

The F8 program is part of the Borough's efforts to meet the following goals:

- Communicate expectations for being members of the Penn State and State College Community
- Maintain safe, healthy and vibrant neighborhoods
- Promote positive relations between student and non-student residents
- Improve quality of life in neighborhoods near campus
- Improve communication among students and non-students and between organizations
- Build community
- Stabilize property values and tax base.

As detailed in the report, key indicators suggest that there has been progress in meeting these goals and maintaining the quality of life in Borough neighborhoods near campus.

- Offenses reported to the police in the neighborhoods for the F8 study periods in 2007-2013 were below 2006 (pre-F8) levels.
- Arrests for alcohol and noise violations in the neighborhoods for the F8 study periods in 2007-2013 were below 2006 (pre-F8) levels.
- Citizen survey results from 2007 through 2102 showed that more than 85 percent of non-student residents Borough-wide believe their neighborhood is a good or excellent place to live – an approval rating similar to that of other communities participating in the National Citizen Survey (NCS). See Appendix C for additional details on NCS results. No comparable survey data are available for either 2006 or 2013.
- The favorable response rate on NCS survey questions related to quality of life in State College and in the respondents' neighborhood was higher in State College than it was in other university communities 25,000 – 99,000 in population that participated in the national citizen survey

The following tables provide a brief overview and summary of the offenses recorded over the past three F8 reporting periods. More detailed data are provided in the Overall Trends section and the Appendices that make up the complete F8 Report.

Offenses by Type

Total offenses were up by 26 offenses (2.86%) in 2013 compared with 2012 and down by 259 offenses when comparing 2013 with 2011. The major cause of the increase between 2013 and 2012 is attributed to a rise of 59 refuse offenses.

Police Offenses by Neighborhood

Police offenses were down in 2013 when compared to 2011 and 2012.

Offenses by Complainant:

Offenses by Complainant show an increase in complaints by both the public and in officer-initiated complaints. The decrease in officer-initiated complaints in 2013 when compared to 2011 is largely the result of a decrease in officer-initiated refuse complaints, which dropped from 439 in 2011 to 267 in 2013, a decrease of 172 (39%). The total number of refuse complaints recorded in 2013 marked a return to the range of refuse complaints logged in years 2006-2010 where the high was 297 (in 2009) and the low was 182 (in 2006).

| Offenses by Complainant | 2011 | 2012 | 2013 | Change 2012-13 | % Change 2012-13 | Change 2011-13 | % Change 2011-13 |

| Public | 450 | 439 | 461 | +22 | +5.01% | +11 | +2.44% |

Looking at other specific types of complaints by complainant, we see that the number of noise complaints reported by Public remained flat from 2012 to 2013. The total number of noise complaints declined by 20 complaints between 2012 and 2013. Total alcohol offenses declined by nearly 21.2% between 2011 and 2013, with the number of alcohol complaints lodged by the public increasing by 12 complaints (from 29 in 2011 to 41 in 2013).

Conclusions and Recommendations

While it is encouraging to see positive overall trends in the neighborhoods included in the F8 program, additional analysis is needed for several sub-neighborhood areas identified through the report. Moreover, factors may have contributed to the positive reports for 2007-2013. The number of home football games was higher in 2009, contributing to an increase in some offenses above 2007 and 2008 levels (but still below 2006 levels.) Weather also has an impact on any given weekend's activities. Nevertheless, F8 seems to have made a difference and the programs are helping to maintain and improve the quality of life in the neighborhoods near campus.

Based on the data and the assessments by the participants, continuation of the F8 program is recommended. Additional recommendations include the following:

- Establish a contact group with landlords whose properties have historically created problems in neighborhoods to ensure full participation of landlords in addressing problems occurring at their properties. This contact group should begin working prior to the start of the semester and focus on both preventative measures and intervention strategies.
- Continue focus on noise violations, including officer initiated citations for such violations. (Note – if this enforcement is increased substantially the noise violations numbers will likely increase – see discussion in Appendix 7 on officer-initiated versus complaint response enforcement.)
- Increase pre-party contacts and other proactive measures, and explore the feasibility of implementing a party registration program.

- Focus resources on those Police RAs where the greatest number of offenses have historically occurred.
- Increase focus on large parties and gatherings that result in negative impacts on neighborhoods; and continue designating specific teams to be assigned to this effort on a regular basis.
- Continue the NEAT (Neighborhood Enforcement Alcohol Teams), a cooperative effort between State College Borough and Penn State police departments focused on enforcement in neighborhoods south of campus and downtown.
- Explore new ways for the Borough and Penn State police to collaborate on intervention and enforcement in neighborhoods near campus when Penn State students are involved.
- Work with Penn State administrators to find new ways to enable the University to address issues with students and landlords when major neighborhood impacts result from student activities.
- Expand our efforts to use community building activities and alternatives to the criminal justice system to increase civility in our neighborhoods and increase cooperation among student and non-student residents in preventing and resolving problems.
- Institute a Restorative Justice Program and a Good Neighborhood Program.

Overall Trends

Overall from 2006 through 2013 there was decrease in total offenses per year from 1,023 in 2006 to 934 in 2013. This decrease was not a smooth downward trend. The following chart shows the variation in the number of violations each year.

Chart 1j. Offenses for Neighborhood by Year

If we differentiate between police offenses and refuse offenses, we see that much of the variation since 2009 is the result in annual fluctuation in the number of refuse offenses issued. Police offenses essentially plateaued between 2009 and 2012 and took a slight downturn in 2013. Additional analysis is needed to determine the causes of this decline in the number of Police offenses. The following two charts demonstrate this phenomenon:

Chart 1k. Police Offenses for Neighborhood by Year

Chart 1I. Refuse Offenses for Neighborhood by Year

We have observed patterns in violations on the basis of location (i.e., police reporting area), time of day and day of week. In many respects these patterns are not surprising, given the rhythm of the activities occurring in State College during the fall semester. The following charts taken from the report's appendices provide examples of these patterns.

Location/Police Reporting Area

Chart 2a. Offenses by Police RA

Chart 2a shows a compilation of the offenses by police RA for the entire reporting period. In Appendix A-2 the same chart is provided for each of the eight years for which data are available. The pattern observed for each year mimics the pattern shown above. True, in some years more offenses will be recorded in RA D6 or E6 instead of D7 or E8, but the pattern of the greatest number of offenses occurring in those RAs is maintained. A map showing Police Reporting Areas and the density of offenses in each RA is included in the Appendix A-2.

Time of Day (by Hour)

Chart 6a reveals that Police Department activity peaks in the hours between 11:00 p.m. and 2:00 a.m. Police activity is much lower at other times of day. The fact that criminal mischief/trespass and thefts occur more frequent during the day is a function of the time of day when these two types of offenses are reported to the police rather than when they actually occurred. The time of day that refuse offenses, which are not included on this chart, occur is a function of when the ordinance enforcement officer observes the offense and issues either a warning or a field violation. This occurs most frequently between the hours of 6:00 a.m. and noon on weekends.

Day of Week

It is not surprising that more violations occur from Friday morning to Saturday morning and Saturday morning through Sunday morning. However, as this charts reveals, a substantial number of police offenses occurs from Thursday morning through Friday morning. In addition, one will note from the data, some level of police activity occurs throughout the remainder of the week.

By Week

Appendix A-4 provides data on the number of violations per week for each of the weeks included in the reporting period. The reporting period begins the week prior to the return of the university student population for fall semester and runs through Thanksgiving weekend. Due to the changeable nature of Penn State home football games, the pattern in occurrence of police activities reflects the home schedule each and the weekend of Halloween. A second pattern that will be observed when reviewing Appendix A-4 is that more police activity occurs during the earlier parts of the semester than in the latter weeks when the weather become less amenable to outside activities.

As an alternative format for displaying these trends, staff prepared a line graph for police offenses that were recorded from 2006-2013. This provides the reader with a snapshot of how the different police offenses moved each year for the eight years for which data are available.

Conclusion

Staff believes the data confirm that patterns in the type and time of offenses are clearly discernable. The good news is that the neighborhoods are not experiencing a sustained increase in police offenses. The bad news is that the number of police offenses seems to have hit a plateau. The community, that is municipal and university officials, residents (both student and non-student), and owners of rental properties need to work together to identify methods to improve the situation experienced in neighborhoods close to downtown and campus.

Data Notes

Data Notes on the Appendix

Extensive, detailed data are provided in the nine chapters in the Appendix. A brief synopsis of the data is provided at the beginning of each chapter. The police and ordinance enforcement data for the 16 weeks in the four neighborhood areas are provided in detail in the following appendices (numbers correspond to appendix number A-__):

1. Offenses by neighborhood (Includes map of the four neighborhoods near the campus that are included in all the data sets.)
2. Offenses by reporting areas (smaller police reporting areas within each neighborhood)
3. Offenses by type by year and by neighborhood
4. Offenses by week for police and separately for noise/refuse/alcohol
5. Offenses by day of week
6. Police offenses by hour (Police only; ordinance enforcement is not tracked on an hourly basis.)
7. Offenses by complainant
8. Offender demographics
- B. Development of the F8 program
- C. National Citizen Survey 2012 key responses

In addition to those data, the report includes information on Penn State home football game schedule and number of students enrolled at the University. It should be noted that neighborhood by neighborhood data are not available for the Citizens' Survey. These data are Borough-wide.

The F8 project has been active from 2007 through 2013. Year 2006 is our data control year, before the F8 project began. The F8 reporting start date is two Mondays prior to student return, so that data cover one full week prior to student return for comparison purposes. The end date is 16 full weeks after the start date. Each week runs Monday to Sunday. Data cover the following date ranges:

| Year | Start Date | End Date |
|------|--------------|--------------|
| 2006 | Aug 21, 2006 | Dec 10, 2006 |
| 2007 | Aug 13, 2007 | Dec 2, 2007 |
| 2008 | Aug 11, 2008 | Nov 30, 2008 |
| 2009 | Aug 10, 2009 | Nov 29, 2009 |
| 2010 | Aug 9, 2010 | Nov 28, 2010 |
| 2011 | Aug 8, 2011 | Nov 27, 2011 |
| 2012 | Aug 13, 2012 | Dec 2, 2012 |
| 2013 | Aug 12, 2013 | Dec 1, 2013 |

Data are restricted to offenses in select State College Borough residential neighborhoods: Highlands, Holmes-Foster, and College Heights. Offenses occurring on properties, as well as in the street and on sidewalks, are included. Offenses occurring on commercial properties, the downtown area, Penn State campus, high-rise apartment buildings, and other areas are not included. The Holmes-Foster neighborhood includes the area known as the West End. The Highlands neighborhood is divided into Highlands North and Highlands South, with Hamilton Avenue as the dividing line.

Data were retrieved from the Police Department records management system for the following offenses:

- Assaults, Fights, and Harassment
- Criminal Mischief/Trespass
- Drugs
- Liquor, including offenses related to underage drinking
- Noise
- Public Urination
- Sex Crimes
- Thefts

Data were retrieved from the Health Department for refuse offenses. Because refuse data do not include time of day, refuse offenses are excluded from any reporting by hour.

To report offenses by week, yearly data was divided into 16 weeks:

Everyone likes to have a good time. But in addition to being a fun host you also have a responsibility to be a good citizen and mature host. The State College Police Department and Penn State University Police Department provide the following advice for hosting a responsible party:

Before the party...

- Have a guest list. Limit your party to those you know to prevent unwanted behavior and problems.
- Discuss ending time with roommates. Decide who will end the party.
- Appoint a sober monitor. The monitor's job is to turn away uninvited guests, help enforce house rules, talk with the police if they show up, and watch for drunk drivers.
- Educate yourself about PA Law for noise and alcohol distribution.
- Lock valuables away.
- Notify your neighbors before the day of the party.
- Discuss which food and non-alcoholic drinks you will be serving.

During the party...

- Check IDs. Ensure those drinking are legal drinking age. Not carding does NOT release you from legal responsibilities!
- Limit your guests' alcohol consumption. Plan how you will intervene to slow down a guest who is drinking too much.
- Call 911 immediately in a case of an emergency, or 1-800-479-0050 in a non-emergency.
- Limit noise levels, parking, trespassing, littering, public urination, and other possible violations to avoid having police called.
- If police arrive, make sure the monitor is the first person the officer sees.
- Allow officers to do their job without interference. Follow all police instructions.

Alcohol Poisoning...

As a party host, you are responsible for your guests' health. Here are the signs that indicate alcohol poisoning, which, if untreated, can lead to death:

- Cold, bluish, clammy skin
- Unresponsive (you can't wake them up)
- Shallow and/or irregular breathing
- Vomiting
- "Snoring" sounds
- Other danger signs
- Mixing alcohol with medications or drugs
- Collapsing after drinking
- Vomiting and choking

What to do - Call 911 immediately! Do not give the person food or water or your guest may choke.

Ending the party...

- Tell the monitor to stay by the door to turn away new guests.
- Turn on the lights.
- Change the music or turn it off.
- Stop serving alcohol. Serve only soda, water, or coffee.
- Make sure intoxicated guests are not driving. Call a taxi, or have guests sleep over.
- Encourage guests to leave in small groups of three to four. This will help prevent excessive noise.

Before F8

State College Borough has experienced issues related to the impact of students on residential neighborhoods for many years. Many thousands of university students move out of the residence halls or transfer from branch campuses each year and begin their first experience in independent living in the Borough. There are 9,900 rental housing units in State College Borough, the great majority of which are student occupied. The rental units are mostly in high rise buildings in the central business district, but significant numbers are located in Borough neighborhoods - in smaller apartment buildings, in large old homes converted into apartments or rooming houses, in fraternities and in single family homes rented to students or owned by students' families.

Students living in or visiting friends in Borough neighborhoods often have lifestyles that conflict with those of their older neighbors. Students' late hours, noisy parties, and alcohol-fueled behavior issues impact residential neighborhoods where residents raise families and appreciate respect for the needs and rights of the neighbors. These issues arise from new experiences for students, including:

- New-found freedom
- Exploring new social boundaries
- Access to alcohol
- Renewing friendships
- Social networking
- Football and other large events
- Lifestyle conflicts

Over the past decade the number of students at Penn State has grown by 10 percent while the number of residence hall units on campus has remained level. This has added 4,000 more students to the community's population.

State College and Penn State have recognized the significant impact the influx of students each autumn has on the community and its residential neighborhoods, particularly those close to the campus: the Highlands, Holmes Foster and College Heights neighborhoods. Many of the Borough's responses to this dynamic have been regulatory in nature. Examples of this include the enactment of occupancy limits, the adoption of property maintenance standards, the enactment of a rental permit suspension ordinance and the creation of the student home land use category. The University also responded with regulations through the extension of its Code of Conduct to apply to off-campus behavior.

The community also implemented strategies that do not rely on regulations, such as the first-time home buyer program and the home rehab program, as tools to entice owner occupants to either move into or remain in the Borough. Town and gown have worked together on a variety of programs targeted at addressing destructive behavior such as binge drinking. While these programs may have enforcement elements, they also focus on educating the community on the dangers of certain behaviors. For all the benefits that have resulted from these initiatives, more remained to be done to improve the quality of life in our neighborhoods for all of our residents.

Experience in State College and collaboration with other university communities has shown that the initial weeks of the fall semester are a critical time to set the expectations for the entire year. This was particularly reinforced in 2007 when Borough and University staff visited Fort Collins and Boulder, Colorado, host communities for Colorado State University and Colorado University respectively to observe their town-gown fall semester initiatives. This experience underlined the importance of setting the tone – the community’s expectations – for the year as students return to town.

What is F8?

Beginning with the fall semester in 2007 the Borough and University began the F8 initiative. Originally, it referred to the first 8 weeks of the fall semester. Subsequently it has been extended to continue through the football season.

This town – gown partnership includes multiple partners from both sides of College Avenue. State College Borough Administration, Ordinance Enforcement, Police and Centre Region Code Administration meet regularly with Penn State Student Affairs, Office of Greek Life, Judicial Affairs and Police. The work of this unified task force is to identify issues quickly and coordinate responses to set the tone for community expectations for the new academic year. Weekly meetings of the task force are the basis for organizing this effort.

The weekly meetings provide the platform for staff of both town and gown to coordinate responses and plan initiatives for proactive and positive actions as well as increased law and ordinance enforcement collaboration, particularly in neighborhoods near campus. Proactive actions included police officer initiated contacts and, specifically, pre-party contacts when a police officer observed party preparations under way. Increased enforcement included starting limited weekend ordinance enforcement in 2008 and adding more weekend ordinance enforcement in 2009.

Each week for 16 weeks beginning in mid August data is aggregated, reported and shared among the F8 participants. This collaboration among the University and Borough officials and agencies with current data enables police and other staff to focus efforts where they will have the greatest impact in the neighborhoods.

F8 extends far beyond the weekly meetings. One of the most visible of these activities is the Living in One Neighborhood (LION) walk, held during the first week of Penn State classes in late August. Other outreach activities include window posters in downtown businesses, advertisements in The Daily Collegian, and posters in CATA buses. The combined objectives of these F8 efforts are to build community, to establish a sense among all residents, student and non-student, that there are community standards and that each resident is expected to be a responsible part of the community.

Breaking down the barriers between police and other officials and our student residents is an important component of the F8 process. The LION walk is one way of putting a human face on public officials. Pre-party contacts, distributing information on how to conduct a safe party, working with university officials and event organizers to identify large social events, and initiating follow-up contacts at residences where problems have occurred in the past are all other methods that are used as part of the F8 process to reduce or eliminate problems before they occur. Other outreach activities include window posters in downtown businesses, advertisements in The Daily Collegian, and posters in CATA buses.

At its core, F8 is a community-building initiative. It strives to build a sense of community in a number of ways. It attempts to convey to our student residents what expectations for living in neighborhoods are held by other members of our community. F8 is a process, not a once-and-done project. To be successful, the attitudes in F8 must become part of the everyday culture. One of the most important messages F8 can send is that civic vitality is built on capacity of people to trust one another. Trusting one another depends on getting to know each other better, on identifying shared values and overcoming areas where you hold contrasting values. It inculcates the concept that citizens are responsible for quality of life in the community. While the government has a role to play in maintaining a community's quality of life, it is critical that a community's citizens are concerned with the quality of life in their community and are committed to taking steps necessary to maintain that quality of life. Finally, while measuring results is important, it is equally important to know that you have done the work to bring people together and help them make community connections.
